

Hello All,

I just wanted to start the year off with a brief report of my first week at Notre Dame. After this I plan on sending an e-mail towards the end of each month of the school year. The first week was a very productive one for me and the rest of the incoming freshman class here at ND. The weekend was long with orientation activities going from early in the morning to late at night. On Monday, I auditioned for the University Choirs and found out on Tuesday that I was accepted to the University Chorale. Classes are going well, though with them only starting on Tuesday, its hard to make a definitive evaluation of them.

Our first pep rally was this Friday in the athletic center. One of the many speakers was Joe Theisman. As I'm sure many of you know, our first football game was this Saturday at home against Georgia Tech, and, even though we lost, it was an exciting time and an electric atmosphere and I can't wait for the next home game in three weeks.

That is all the news I have at this point. If you know of anyone who wants to receive these mailings who isn't, or if you would like to be removed from my list, let me know through this e-mail address.

Until next time, God bless and Go Irish!

Jesse
